PROactive PRONUNCIATION

“Upsilon” /ʊ/ in Sentences

Look at the butcher
Brooke was a rookie at cooking
Pull the wool from the cushion
You shouldn’t look at the sun
That’s my favorite cookbook
I put your hoodie on the hook
You should read the good book
Those sugar cookies look good
Put the sugar in the sugar cookies
He’s a crook, but he’s good-looking
I would like to know if I should do it
He took a look at my chocolate pudding
The man put the book on his wooden desk
Put the wooden hook on the hood of my car
He shook the bottle near the Brooklyn Bridge
I’m putting the bushel of bush-berries here
Would you eat a bushel of fully cooked apples?
I would love to read my friend’s script if I could
He shook his hoof before he stomped on my foot
The bull stood near the brook to look at the water
Butch used to live in a good neighborhood in Brooklyn
I stood as I pushed and pulled the bush out of the ground
I shouldn’t have looked at his rook when we played chess
She took the book away from the dirty wood stove
I looked at the full bag of wood, and then I shook it for bugs
How much wood would a woodchuck chuck if a woodchuck could chuck wood