PROactive PRONUNCIATION

“AH EE” /aI/ Sentences

The liar was on trial
I aspire to be a scientist
Friday night was a wild party
I require a higher quality dryer
The lion was trying to be quiet
Why is the price so high for that light?
I hate lime pie, but I don’t mind apple pie
I might as well take care of the crying child
Why did the guy try to light the fire tonight?
The man had to fight all night in the bright light
My wife was wise to be polite about winning the prize
I have no idea which item it was either (also pronounced “ee ther”)
He had to acquire an alibi after starting a dire cyber attack
I aspire to be wise about my health instead of starting a fad diet
The bicycle guy arrived on time despite a broken bicycle tire
I cried my eyes out when they went blind after staring at the bright light
Don’t deny the pie to the child in line
I have a dying desire to play with dried ice
The giant tire went flying by on the highway
I never thought that if I were to buy a kite, it would fly into a high wire
The liar on trial wanted to fight the crime he committed to avoid the fine
The biggest prize of the night was quite a surprise
A satisfied client requires a reply right on time
Submit your modified design and don’t rely on my reply
If I don’t stop that rifle riot, I’ll die trying
I’ll never find the flashlight in this box of wires
There’s a nice, polite guy at my local library
Only a scientific mind could accurately analyze this trial
The kind child offered me his Key Lime Pie
He had a weak alibi for lighting the prior wild fires
If you light that dynamite, you’ll cause a fire crisis in this dry weather
I had the nicest night of my life
It was a wild idea to wear a tie-dye suit to the wedding
Do you have five minutes to say hi and bye to your friends at the fish fry?
He was hired and fired on the same day
I found the private diary that she left behind