PROactive
ACCENT REDUCTION

Homonyms

Homonyms are words that have the same spelling and sound the same but have different meanings. Many of the words with multiple syllables change meaning when you stress one syllable over another. For example, we stress, or place greater emphasis on most nouns and adjectives in the first syllable, so the word "subject," stressed in the first syllable "SUBject" would be the noun, where if you were to stress the second syllable as in most English verbs, the word would sound like "subJECT." Stressing the syllable is done by making the syllable louder, longer, and higher pitched. If you are unaware of some of the double meanings, refer to the dictionary for both descriptions.

accent
address
back
ball
bank
bar
bark
bat
battery
brace
buck
building
can
character
chest
club
console
content
contract
crane
date
default
degree
dessert
discharge
discount
dismiss
display
down
drain
duck
fall
file
fine
firm
float
fly
foot
gas
grave
harbor
hoe
implant
import
increase
insert
insult
invite
jam
just kind
land
leaves
left

lie
lighter
manifest
match
may mean
median
mind
mint
model
mouse
nail
notice
novel
object
odd
one
palm
park
patient
perfect
permit
pin
pitch
play
pop
pound
present
proceeds
progress
project
protest
quarter
rebel
recall
record
refund
reservation
right
ring
rock
roll
rose
round
ruler
saw
scale
seal
second
sheer
show
sink
spring
story
subject
survey
suspect
tie
top
train
type
update
wave