PROactive PRONUNCIATION

INTONATION: Falling and Rising

Falling intonation:

Hello!
Good morning.
How nice of you.
I'm working at my computer right now.
She was late today.
You won the race!
It's already 9:00!
I'm allergic to dairy.
It was nice to see you yesterday.
Please sit down.
Go home.
Shut the door.
Who is that?
Where did he go?
Why did she go there?
When will you be home?
Why were you at the office?
Who is in the corner?
Where were you last night?
How old are you?

Rising Intonation:

Did you do your homework yesterday?
Doesn't he like ketchup?
Didn't you get my texts?
Did she give him his money back?
Jen has a fever?
He has a snake as a pet?
Can you believe he did that?
Can you pass me that book?
Do you need a printed copy?
Could you bring it with you tomorrow?
Do you want to go to the movies tonight?
You want to grab a coffee?

A sentence can be said with either a falling or rising intonation. You will choose the intonation based on whether the sentence is a statement or a question that's not a WH-question. Say the following sentences with a rising or falling intonation.

Statement: He wasn't embarrassed when he tripped in the gym.
Question: He wasn't embarrassed when he tripped in the gym?

Statement: You got a haircut.
Question: You got a haircut?

Statement: Your mom is going shopping.
Question: Your mom is going shopping?

Statement: We have to fly to Florida.
Question: We have to fly to Florida?

Statement: I'm early.
Question: I'm early?

Statement: No one knows the answer.
Question: No one knows the answer?

Statement: Alex couldn't get his door open.
Question: Alex couldn't get his door open?

Statement: The boss said we couldn't leave early today.
Question: The boss said we couldn't leave early today?

Statement: She plays the flute.
Question: She plays the flute?

Statement: I was late to work today.
Question: I was late to work today?