PROactive PRONUNCIATION

Intonation In Lists

Intonation drops when a speaker has finished their list. This drop in intonation signals that the speaking turn is complete. If the pitch of the intonation has not fallen, it tells the listener you have not yet finished, and there is more for you to say. When you make a list or give more information, the pitch should not drop until the end. This drop signals completion.

Example of a list:

